INTRODUCES

IKEA IN THE MUSEUM (OF ROMANTICISM)

PROBLEM:

In some countries, IKEA is perceived as low quality furniture, just functional. Used more to furnish college students' apartments, than classy living rooms.

To demonstrate that our furniture can fit in the most stylish living rooms we did something that seemed impossible.

IDEA:

We snuck some IKEA furniture in the museum with the largest collection of XIX century living rooms in Europe and challenged people to find it.

It was also possible to detect the furniture on mobile through 360° pictures, or even taking part in our Instagram Live video.

And, of course, buy the furniture via e-commerce.

RESULTS:

10% INCREASE IN TOTAL SALES

Communication Process

Types of Noise

- Anything that interferes with transmission /reception of a message information can become corrupted by indirect communication.

- Physical noise
 - Loud background noise, dim vs. bright light, hot and cold temperature, crowdedness, bad odor, uncomfortable setting
- Physiological noise
 - Feeling tired, hungry, and illness (visual/hearing impairment)
- Psychological noise
 - Bias toward a person/message.
 - Preoccupied by other problems, currently in a bad mood
- Semantic noise
 - Messages are too long, contain typos, jargon, too much/little info
 - Messages that are sent too often, at the wrong time (too early or too late, not enough time to react)
 - Faulty language translate

TMB Case: No Transaction Fee

- ค่าธรรมเนียม = Fee

Effective communication

Communicate with the target audience in a manner that convincingly conveys the firm's competitive advantage

- Present accurate, useful, truthful ideas (information)
- In a manner that makes them clearly understood (communicate)
- Cause the consumer to believe the message is true (convince)
- Be as appealing or more appealing than the message delivered by competitors (compete)

Steps in Developing Effective Marketing Communication

Step 1: Identifying the Target Audience

- Target audience
 - Primary audience: the main group you want to reach
 - Secondary audience: may not be interested in your product but can influence primary audience e.g. parents, children, friends

The target audience for pregnancy tests

- women between the ages of 18-34, with a college education
 - parents of the youngest of these women, who either approve or disapprove of this product based on advertising messages
 - government agencies who assess the truthfulness of the product claims
 - potential stockholders who determine the future success of the firm based on the perceived quality of the messages
- Target audience affects decisions on what will be said, how, when, where it will be said, and who will say it.

Step 2: Determining Communication Objectives

- The objectives should explain
 - 1) the impact of communication activity on target audiences
 - 2) the ultimate results or outcomes that align with the firm's marketing strategy and goals.
- Common objectives: Increase brand awareness, Enhance brand image, interest, Stimulate purchase, repurchase, referral
- Objectives may be set to move buyers through adoption process

Promotion Objectives	Adoption Process	AIDA Model
Informing	{ Awareness Interest	Attention Interest
Persuading	Evaluation } Trial	Desire
Reminding	Decision } Confirmation	Action

AIDA Model Stages Typical Campaign Objectives

Awareness:

Build awareness to motivate further action

Develop brand awareness and recognition

Increase traffic to physical or virtual stores, Web sites, or other channels

Remind customers about a brand, product, service or category

Interest:

Generate interest by informing about benefits;
shaping perceptions

Differentiate a product, stressing benefits and features not available from competitors

Provide more information about the product or the service because information may be correlated with greater likelihood of purchase

Increase demand for a specific product or a product category; generate enough interest to research further

Desire:

Create desire; move from “liking” to “wanting”

Build brand equity by increasing customer perceptions of quality, desirability, and other brand attributes

Stimulate trial, an important step in building new brands and rejuvenating stagnant brands

Change or influence customer beliefs and attitudes about a brand, product, or category, ideally creating an emotional connection

Action:

Take action toward purchasing

Reduce purchase risk to make prospective customers feel more comfortable buying a new or unfamiliar product or brand

Encourage repeat purchases in the effort to increase usage and brand loyalty

Increase sales and/or market share, with the goal of broadening reach within a time period, product category, or segment

Nissan's Infiniti

□ Awareness

- An ad focuses on the name to create name familiarity

□ Interest

- Extensive ad create knowledge about the quality and features
- Ad extols the Infiniti's advantages over competing brands.

□ Desire

- PR activities stress the innovative features and performance.
- Dealer salespeople tell buyers about options, value for the price, and after-sale service.

□ Action

- Salespeople invite a customer to visit the dealership for a special showing and test drive
- Offering special promotional prices, rebates, or premiums.

MC alone cannot create positive feelings and purchases, without superior value of the product

- Who is the target?

Stages	AIDA Model ^a	Hierarchy-of-Effects Model ^b
Cognitive Stage	Attention	Awareness ↓ Knowledge
Affective Stage	Interest ↓ Desire	Liking ↓ Preference ↓ Conviction
Behavior Stage	Action	Purchase

Step 3: Designing a message

- The Big Idea: the overarching, impactful, differentiated concept/message that can stretch across all media in order to resonate with the target audience
 - A hook/theme you want audience to recall, share, act upon
 - Without clear, unique idea, less likely to break through the noise and draw customer attention
- Big idea revolves around
 - Customer's problems
 - Powder: Oily face = Lubricant
 - The role of product that fits people's life
 - A4 paper: Paper contains important information. Wrong decision/behavior due to the poor paper
 - CCTV = truth
- Big idea has to be rooted in a piercing insight and linked to the campaign's objectives to endure its impact and relevance

3.1 Uncover an insight

- Research about the target audience and the product category to find a real truth about
 - problem to solve for the consumer
 - motivational forces behind one's thoughts/actions/behaviors.
- Example
 - Using electric razor is less masculine
 - Diet coke is for women
 - High school students wearing a makeup as a form of investment

When you are hungry, it's hard to concentrate and hard to focus on what matters. You don't perform to the level you normally do because there's something missing.

3.2 Find the brand Connection

- The insight enables a brand to start brainstorming ideas and solutions to challenge the consumer problem or need
- List out unique features and benefits of products that are relevant to the insight and that your competitors cannot imitate

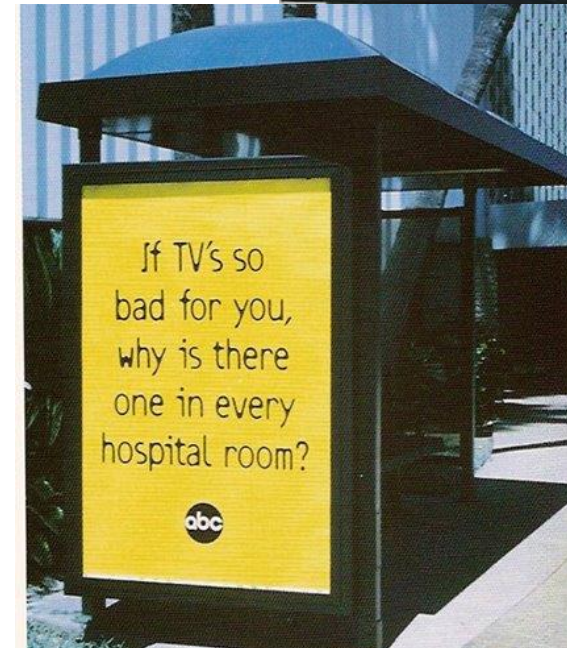

(Brand Connection)

Snickers is the perfect way to get back to being yourself. Packed full of peanuts, caramel, nougat, and milk chocolate, Snickers satisfies your hunger – all in a quick and easy-to-carry snack.

3.3 Articulate the idea

- Any communication effort needs a hook that you'll want people to attend, recall, share and act upon
- Shorten your message to one sentence (brief, simple, clear, relevant)
- Find creative ways to phrase the sentence to hook or grab attention
 - Use superlatives or powerful words: The best, worst, longest or shortest, or highest or lowest, free, new, exclusive, guaranteed, instant
 - Use number: 5 Mistakes... or 7 Tips...
 - Arouse curiosity: Secrets of,
 - Incite emotion (e.g. fear, FOMO): Warning, other people have tried....
 - Use thought-provoking rhetoric question: If TV's so bad, why is there one in every hospital room
 - Combine with picture speaking better than words

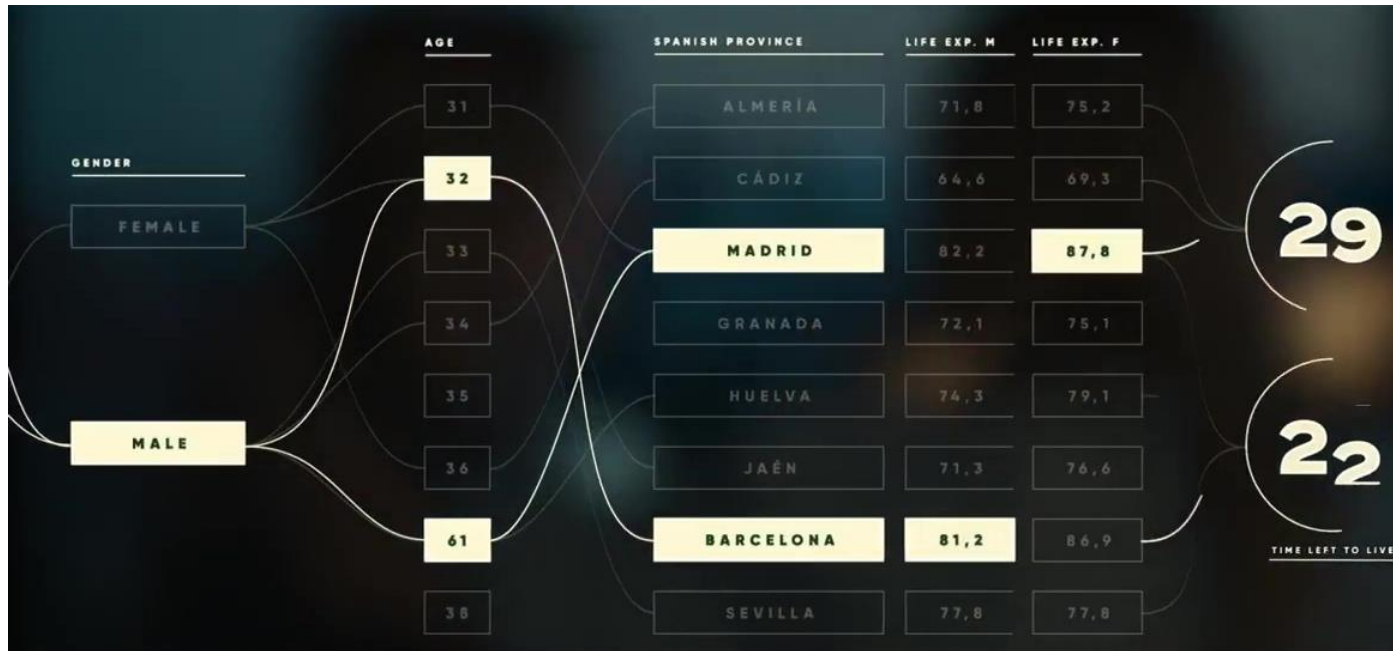

SUCCESS principle of sticky idea

- SIMPLE: Keep the message simple. Choose one takeaway or one attribute to promote. Highlight the single most important thing
- UNEXPECTED stands out: The best ideas represent a break from the everyday, the ordinary, the status quo. Create an element in the ad that is surprising or even catches people off guard.
- CONCRETE: We must present our ideas in term of sensory information. Put tangible to the intangible to make it concrete. The only way to ensure that our idea means the same thing to everyone. Give examples to bring what you're saying to life. Show things visibly.
- CREDIBLE: Use claims that are credible, giving a reason to believe they're true. Instead of saying, "We do great work," find a way to show people how you do great work. Who are your well-known clients? Whom did you help? What recognition or certifications have you received? What statistics can you use?
- EMOTIONAL: Attach emotions to what you're describing in the promotional message such as: inspiration / passion, fear, humor, or happiness. Give a reason to care about your idea. Use music, image, colors to add emotions into promotional messages
- STORIES: Stories foster our imagination. People remember stories and connect with them. If you want people to remember a message, portray it with a story.

Compelling message often brings an unexpected, alternative perspective

- Brand Ruavieja launched the campaign to raise awareness about the need to prioritise quality time over Face Time and wasted time. It features a spooky calculator that predicts how much time we have left to spend with friends and family.
- The prediction generator asks questions such as how often the subjects meet up, their age, where they live etc and then blends it with data based on statistical information from different sources

Humor

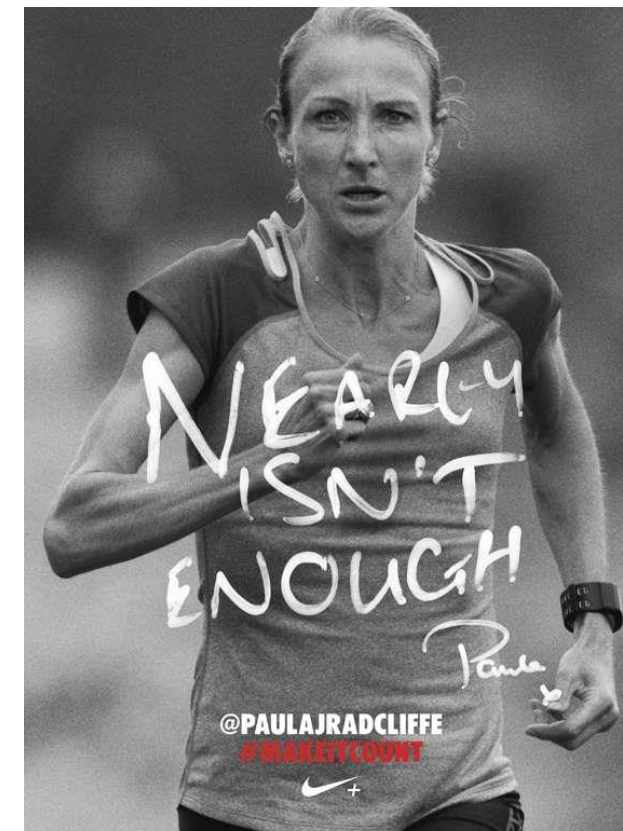

Excitement

Inspiration

EMOTIONAL APPEAL

Pain

Sadness

Create a compelling story to convey a message

- Storytelling can create motivate customers, and make a brand more personal, more human, more memorable.
- Story elements
 - Character: Who is the hero? We want someone to root for.
 - Setting where the story takes place to make the story real and relatable.
 - slice-of-life (normal/daily life setting), lifestyles, fantasy
 - Conflict: Problems/obstacles the character face. These adds tension, which gets us emotionally involved
 - Solution: After a period of struggle with his problems and obstacles, the main character find solutions

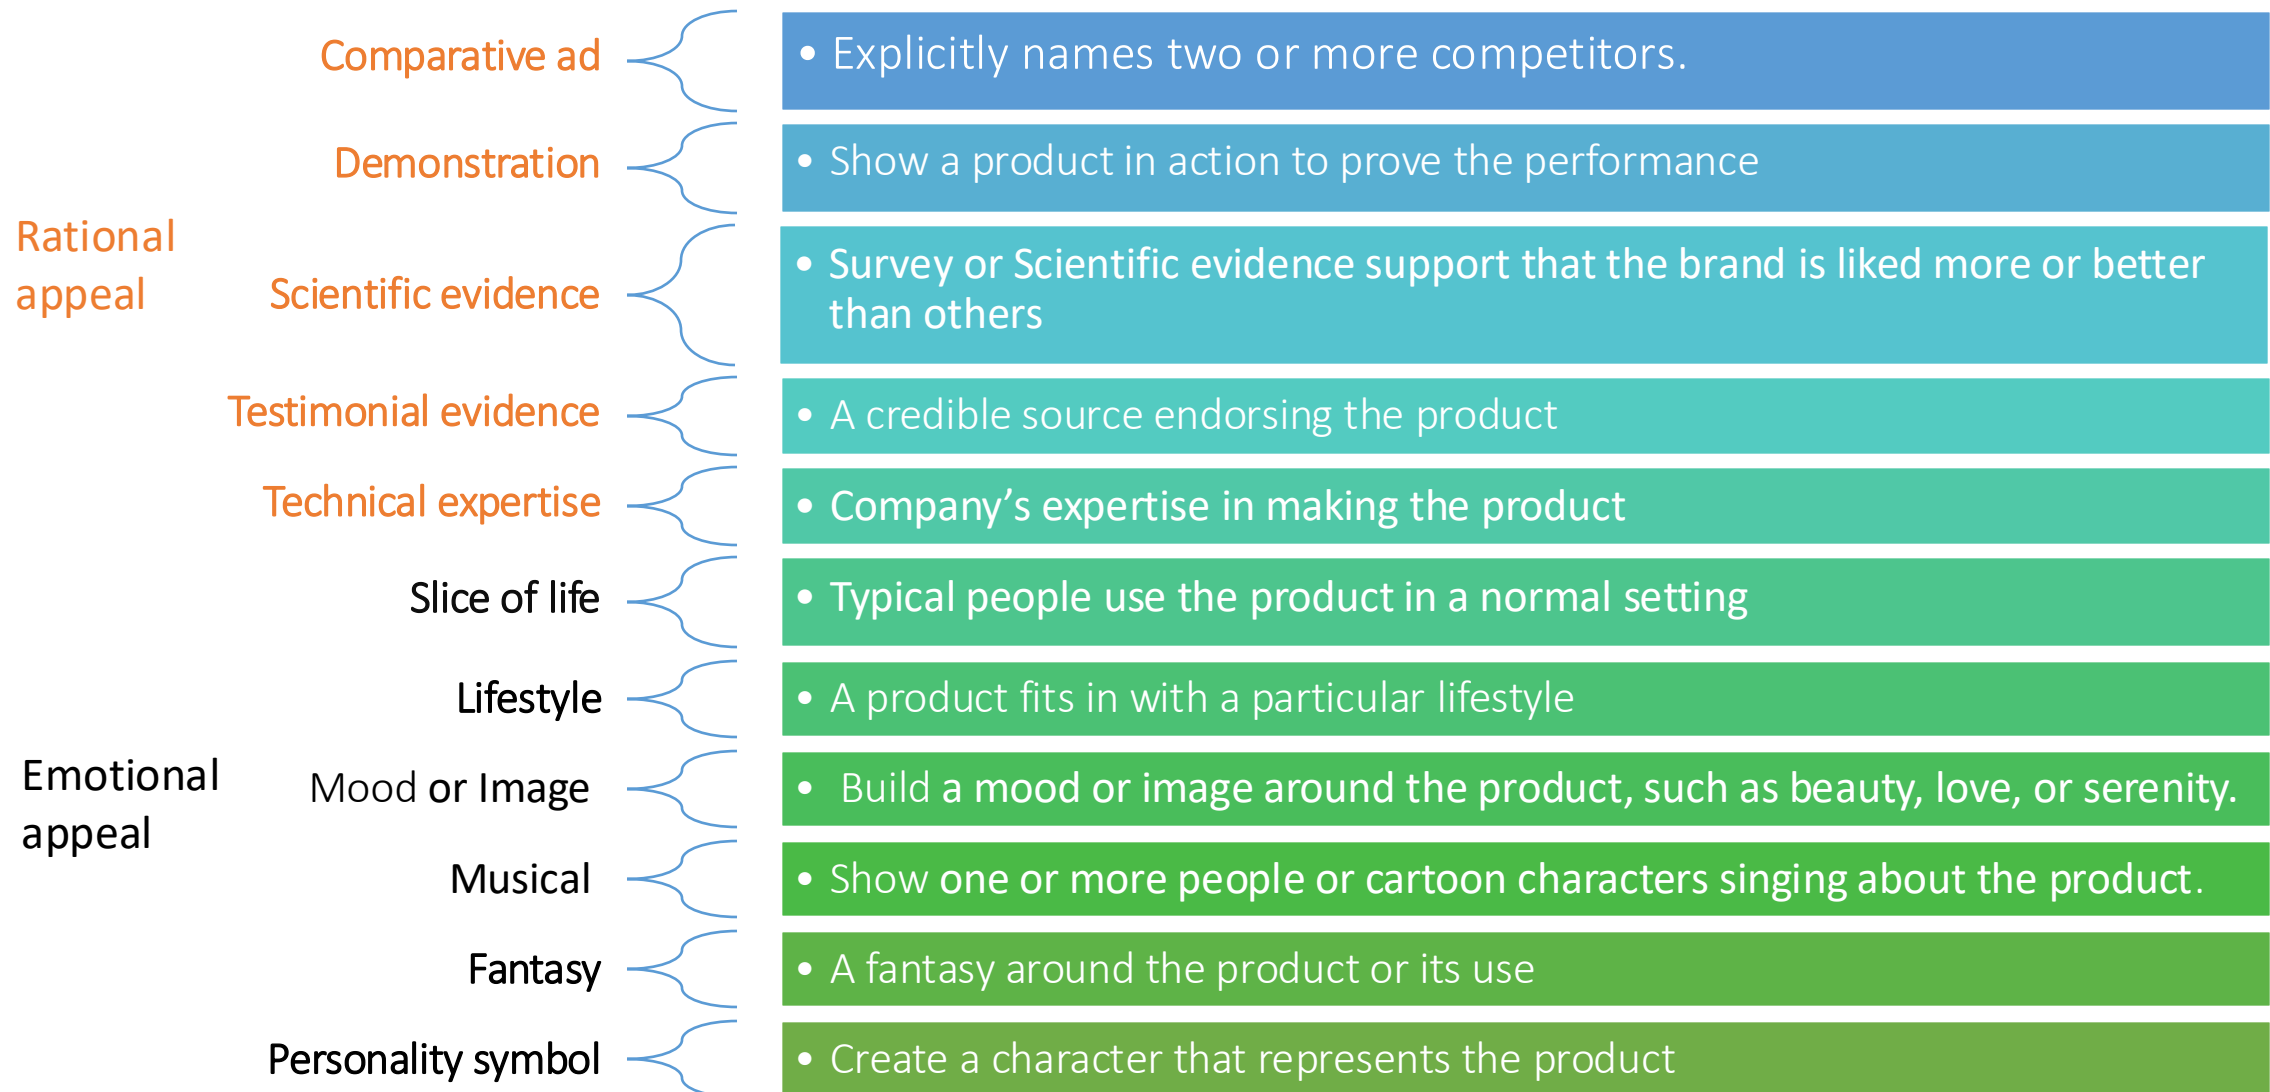

A call to action

- A call to action should be aligned with the campaign goal, appropriate to the AIDA model stage, the audience, and the tool being used.
 - For example,
 - Awareness: Click on a paid search ad to visit a Web site and view a product description and comparative product review
 - Interest: Download a white paper outlining how a product offers a novel solution to a common business problem
 - Desire: Request a product demonstration
 - Action Stage: Request a proposal and price quote

3.4 Message Styles

Turn idea into an actual message execution that captures the target's attention & interest.

3.5 Media format evolution

3.5 Message Format

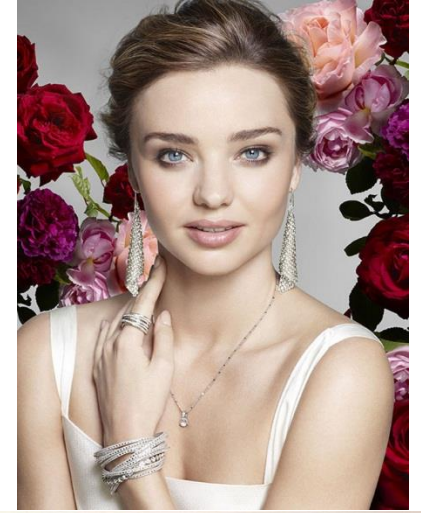

Message format decisions vary with the type of media

- Graphics, layout, color, shape, size, position, words, sounds, voice, movement, body language, texture
- Print ad
 - Headline, copy, script, illustration, colors, message size, position
- Radio
 - Word, sound, voices
- TV
 - Presenter (facial expression, gesture, dress, posture, make-up)
 - Credibility (Expertise, Trustworthiness, Likeability)
- Product packaging
 - Texture, scent, color, size, shape

3.6 Message Source

- Effective spokesperson
 - Expertise
 - Trustworthiness
 - Likeability/attractiveness
 - Relevance/Fit
- Ineffective spokesperson
 - Overused presenters
 - Improper/illegal behavior
 - Choose wrong spokesperson result in embarrassment & a tarnished image

Idol Marketing

Character Marketing

Step 4: choose the channel

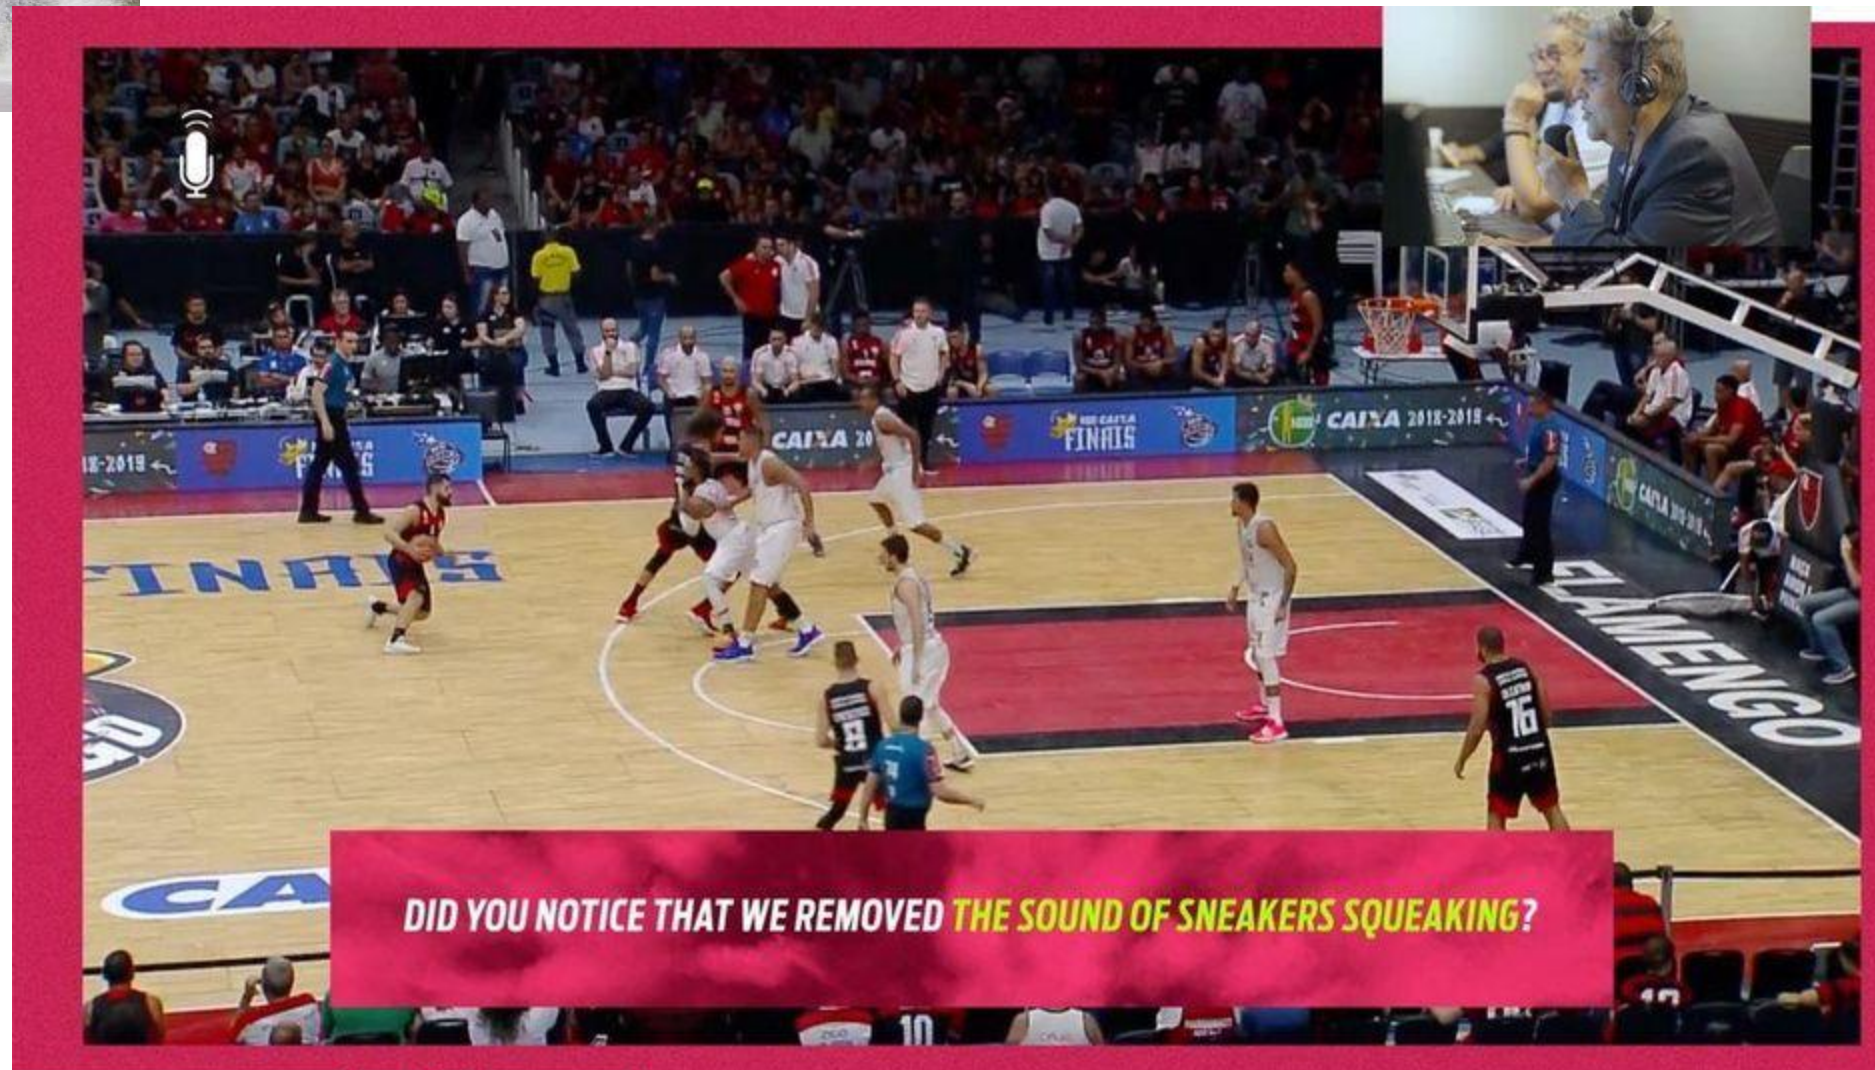

- To get the story to your target audience, it's essential to figure out how to get them to interact with you
- Touch points—where, when, and how the story is shared

A great idea for FORD because of the intimate link between squeaking on the court and anti-skid technology

By eliminating that quintessential "sound of basketball" (the squeaking) the brand creates the perfect stage for its anti-skid message.

Step 4: Communication channel

Personal

- Direct communication
 - Face to face/Skype
 - Phone
 - Mail, E-mail, Line
 - Web board, Social media
- Channels
 - Direct control: salesperson
 - Indirect control: experts (product review), consumer network (word-of-mouth)
 - Offer samples, incentives
 - Create campaigns with high “conversation value”

Step 4: Communication tools

Advertising	• particularly well-suited to awareness-building
Public relations	• often focus on generate interest, educating prospective customers and sharing stories that create desire for a product or brand. Experiential events can create memorable opportunities to interact with product, brands and people.
Personal selling	• typically focuses at the later stages of the model, solidifying desire and stimulating action
Sales promotions	• can be used at any step of the AIDA model. For consumer products, they often focus on point-of-sale touch points to induce buying.
Direct marketing	• can be used at any step of the AIDA model. It is often used to generate interest, providing information or an offer that motivates prospective customers to dig a little deeper and learn more.
Digital marketing	• can be used at any step of the AIDA model at. • Paid digital ads, search optimization and social media word-of-mouth all support awareness-building and generating interest. • Blogs, newsletters, digital case studies and customer testimonials can be powerful tools for stoking desire. • How the website engages customers through the purchasing process is key to persuading prospects to become customers.

Integrated Marketing Communication

- A proliferation of marketing communication tools
 - Messages created by different teams (ad agencies, salesperson, PR, online team, etc.) and can cause confusion
 - Consumers don't distinguish between message sources. All become part of a single message about the company
- Marketers must
 - identify the mix of communication tools that best fit for the audience and marketing objectives, best communicates the brand message, and enhances the customer's brand experiences
 - deliver a unified message and coordinated approach across these tools.
- Integrated marketing communication (IMC)
 - integrates and coordinates all communication channels to deliver a clear, consistent, and compelling message/image, with the same content, look, and feel
 - Benefits of IMC
 - Produce communication consistency and sales impact
 - Build brand identity and customer relationship.
 - Reach and serve target markets better

Step 5: Measure the campaign effectiveness

- Research the effect of the message on the audience
 - Whether they remember the message
 - How many times they saw it
 - What points they recall
 - How they felt about the message
 - Their past and present attitudes toward the product
 - How many people visit the store
 - How many people buy the product
 - How many people share and recommend to others
- Feedback may suggest changes in product/message/media

Marketing Activity/Tool	KPI Examples

Marketing Campaign

- To aid the communication planning process, marketing managers often use a campaign approach e.g. Just do it, Get Mac, Real beauty, A diamond is forever
- A campaign is a planned, coordinated series of marketing communication efforts built around a single theme or idea and designed to reach a particular goal (e.g. increase awareness, change attitudes or behavior)
 - The theme may take the form of a slogan e.g. Sharing a Coke.
 - The theme may refer to a stage in the product life cycle e.g. McDonald's All-Day Breakfast rollout
- In a successfully operated campaign, all activities and tools will be well coordinated to build on one another and increase the overall impact. A single campaign may include
 - Advertising : A series of ads posted on the Website, YouTube, Facebook, and other social media
 - Public relations: A press release announcing something newsworthy in connection to the campaign focus, objectives, and target segment(s)
 - Direct marketing: Direct mail sent to target segments, reinforcing the messages from the ads
 - Sales promotions: In-store display materials reflecting the same messages and design as the ads, emphasizing point-of-sale impact
 - Personal selling: Preparation for customer sales representatives about the campaign to equip them to explain and demonstrate the product benefits stressed in advertising

Example from belvita's Morning Win Campaign

belVita wanted to bring their breakfast biscuit to market in the US at a time when there were many established direct competitors offering similar products.

1. Campaign Objective: to create significant brand awareness, engagement and trial in a crowded marketplace
2. Target audience: 'morning optimists', a group of people who were positive, ambitious but also constantly busy with very hectic lifestyles
3. Big idea (celebrating morning achievement)
3.1 Insight: consumers felt breakfast was very important because they wanted to accomplish a bigger goal in the morning. They want to start the morning positively and seize the day

3.2 Brand connection

- While most brands talked about mornings as a problem, Belvita found the morning was not a problem to be overcome but a fresh opportunity to accomplish things.
- Belvita move towards the idea that their breakfast biscuits give people the energy to fuel a series of victories throughout the morning

3.3 Short message: a new kind of breakfast that fuel your body for the whole morning

A delicious start to a busy morning delivering

4 HOURS OF NUTRITIOUS STEADY ENERGY

belVita, a nutritious, convenient breakfast choice that contains slow-release carbs from wholesome grains to help fuel your body for 4 hours

3.4 Execute the big idea

- belVita helps you do whatever it is in the morning as you have the energy to get it done
- embed the message into the mornings of real people and celebrate those who accomplish victories each morning
- Strategy used: Storytelling
 - story of the character's morning and how he/she has overcome it
 - Consumers feel engaged and entertained with the stories seen in the main Ad and are willing to share with others their own story

4. #MorningWin – "Steady Energy, All Morning Long" campaign comprises

- TV/radio showing the day in the life of someone accomplishing a morning win
 - Differentiation and also association of humorous appeal with the product
 - Jingle created specifically for the advert which is easy to remember and very catchy. The lyrics narrate the story of the character's morning and how she has overcome it
 - All of the adverts share the same characteristics, colours and jingle, making them instantly recognisable to the consumer and easy to associate with the brand

- Social media:

- The advert links the consumers to twitter engaging with them and persuading them to share their own story of how they have overcome their morning
- Instagram is used to share photos and ideas of how to combine BelVita biscuits with other healthy foods. It is also used to share Morning Win

- Direct marketing

- BelVita's Trophy Bot is a personalised trophy made by a 3D Printer and sent by mail to a winning user who has shared their morning win in twitter.
- This strategy follows a more personal approach to each consumer and rewards them for sharing and increasing the campaign's effectiveness
