I. Advertising

- A paid form of non-personal communication about an organization, product, service, brands by an identified sponsor through various media. Usually persuasive in nature.
- Pro:
 - Reaches large, geographically dispersed audiences, often with high frequency
 - Cost-effective. Low cost per exposure
 - Consumers perceive advertised goods as more legitimate
 - Effective way to create brand images and symbolic appeals
- Con:
 - One-way communication. Not effective in closing sale.
 - Not easy to measure results.
 - Total cost of producing and running ads is high.
 - Clutter (so many ads). Negative perception. Block advertising.

Advertising

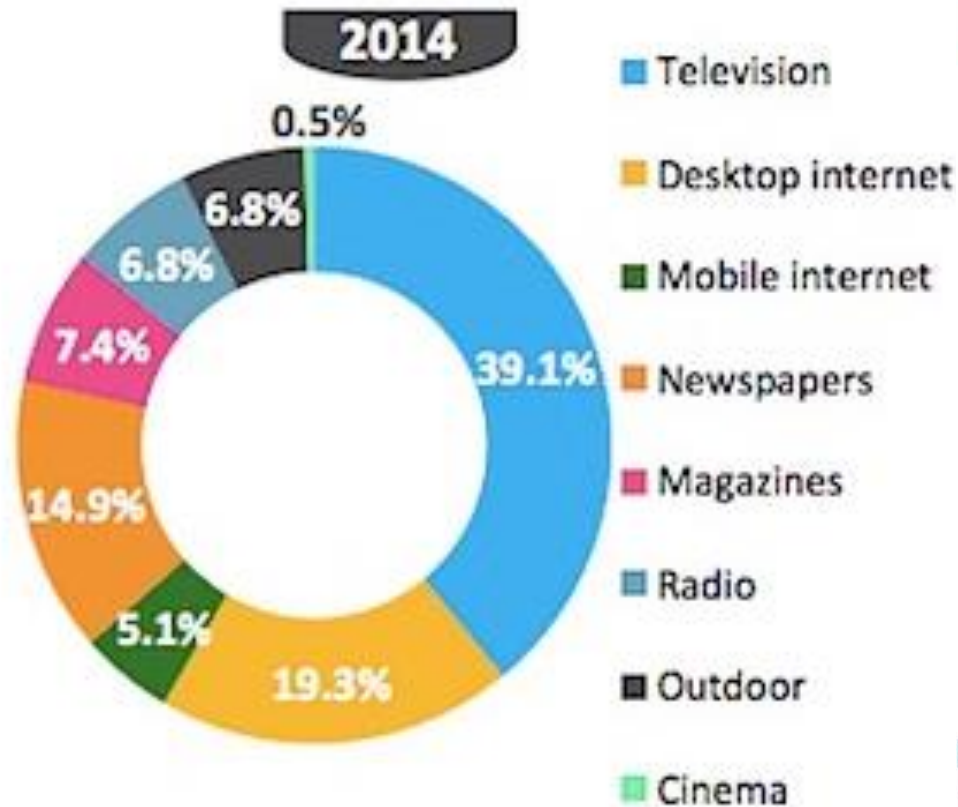

1)Traditional media

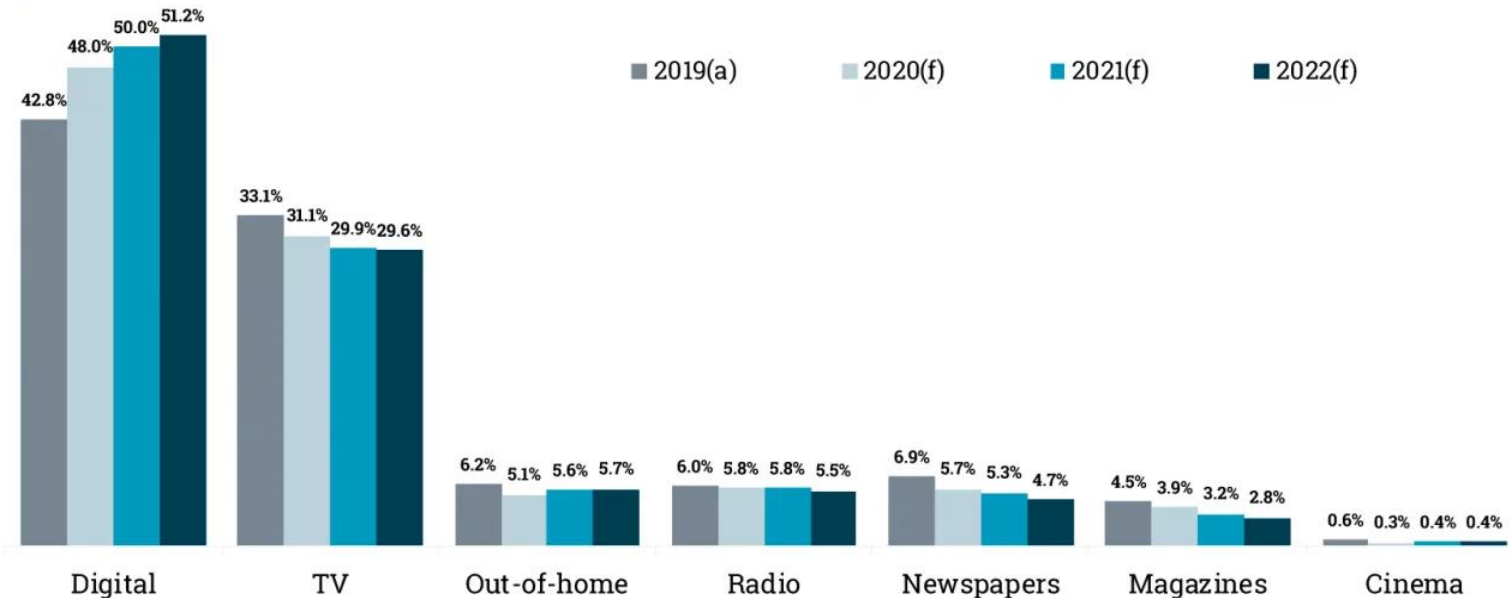

TV	Pro Con	• Appeal to senses, strong impact, mass coverage • High cost, short life, clutter, schedule inflexibility, less audience selectivity
Newspapers	Pro Con	• Market coverage, flexible • Short life, clutter, small pass-along audience, poor paper quality
Magazines	Pro Con	Highly segmented audiences, credible, long life Narrow audience, long ad lead time
Radio	Pro Con	• Low cost, very flexible (production, change) • Limited coverage, short life, audio only, low attention

Dentsu's forecasts are based on its local market expertise and data collated from its brands / * "The forecasts are based on the assumption that an effective global vaccination programme will be rolled out in 2021, enabling key media events to take place."

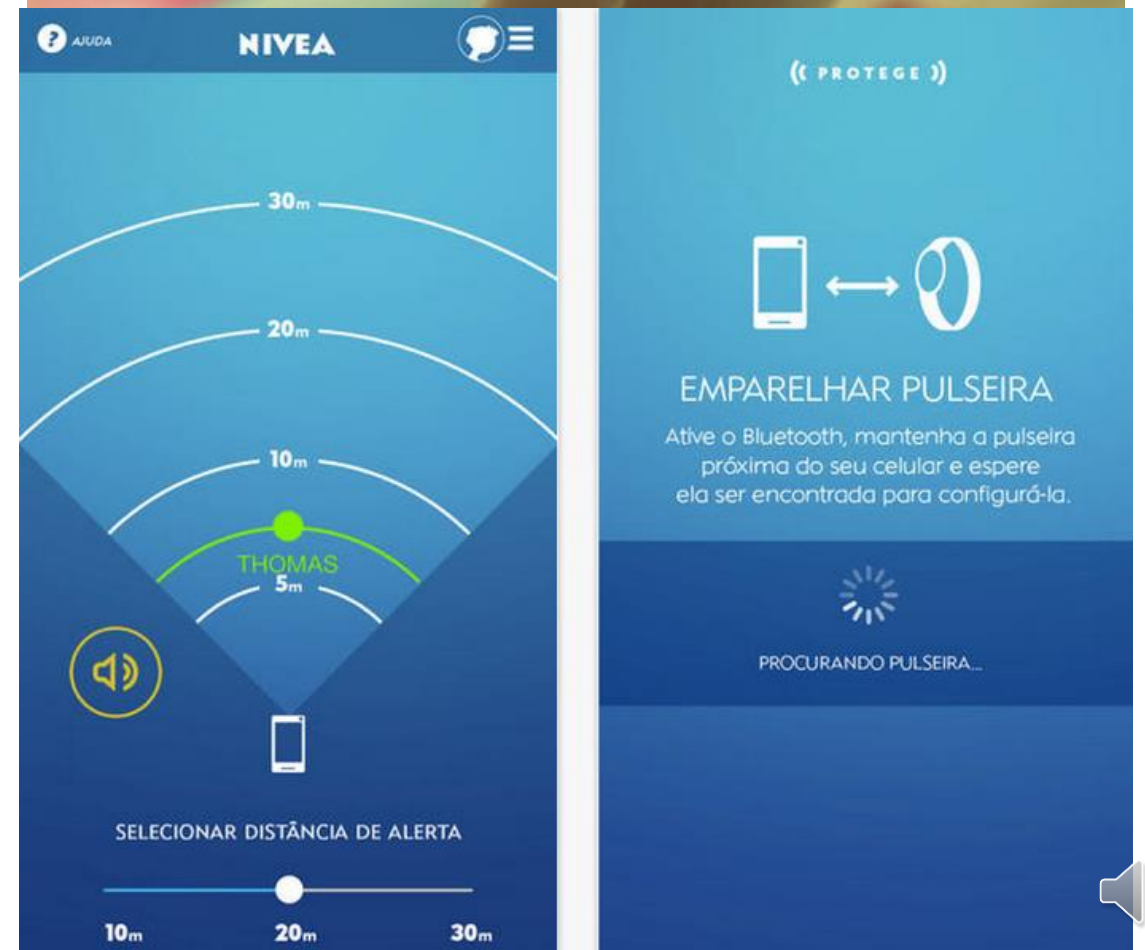

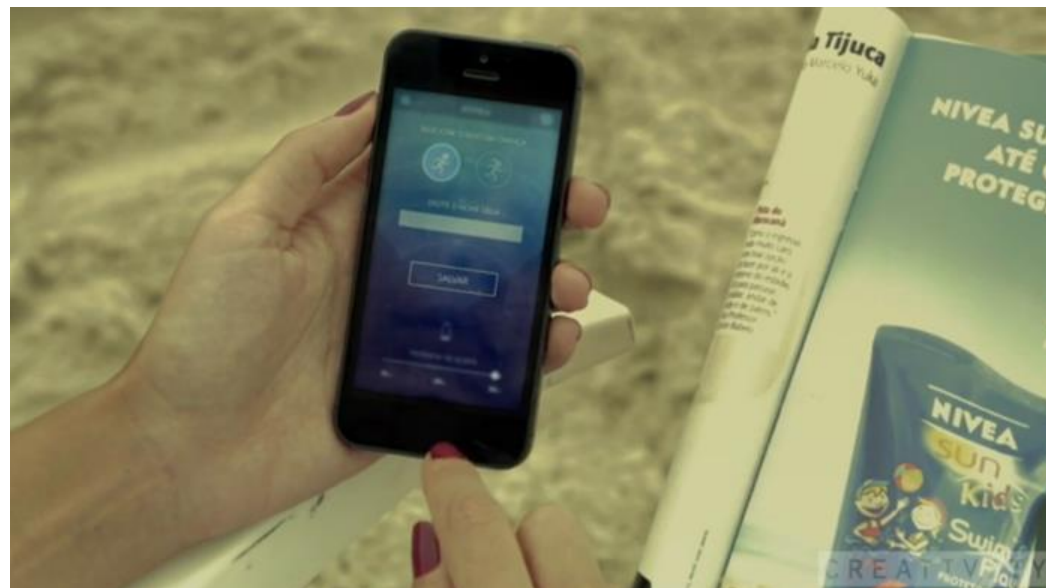

Print Media

- Augmented reality allows a smart phone to read encoded messages in print and allow viewers to interact with the messages, revitalizing the traditional print ad.

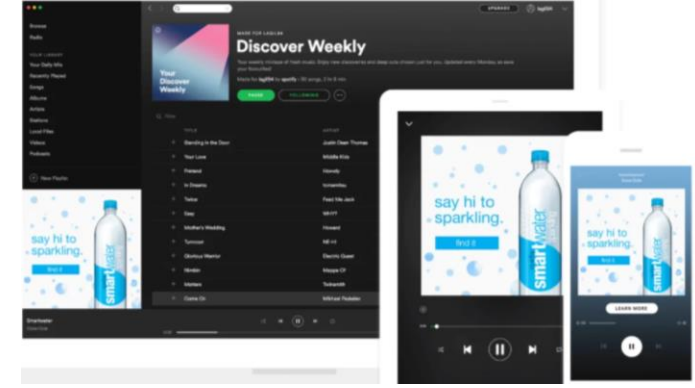

A mobile app and technology-laden magazine insert

Audio Advertising

- Channels: radio, clubhouse, spotify,
- Types of audio ads
 - Paid Spots ranging from 10-60 secs. Spots in podcasts can be a little longer and can be inserted for download version
 - Radio DJs/Clubhouse's event moderator/Podcast hosts read sponsored ads along with some special offer
 - Radio DJs invite audiences to play the games and get some rewards from the brand
 - Podcast Ads target the type of audience the advertiser wishes to reach. Podcast host is perceived as a trusted source or influencer

- Spotify ads
 - Non-skippable audio/video formats (up to 30 secs) that run once in every 15 mins, on the free version of Spotify in between songs, podcasts, and playlists, along with image/link
 - Spotify offers users a number of curated playlists organised according to genre and mood. A Spotify user playing a 'Workout' playlist is likely to be doing only one thing. The same goes for users who have chosen a 'Gaming' or 'Sleep' playlist.
 - 75% of Spotify listeners say they remember ads more when the ads recognize their moment or setting.

"Spotify allows savvy advertisers to craft creative audio ads that speak directly to their targeted audience at moments when they're more likely to be receptive."

Traditional vs. Digital Advertising

Comparison basis	Traditional advertising	Digital advertising
Definition	Traditional advertising refers to the use of traditional mediums such as television, radio, newspapers, magazines, and billboards to promote products or services.	Digital advertising is any form of advertising that appears online or on digital channels like websites, search engines, social media platforms, mobile apps, digital OOH, and other channels that can be accessed digitally.
Reach	Local	More segments, distant location, targeted audience to specific demographics, locations, devices
Conversion rate	Less	High
Communication	One-way	Two-way
Expenses	More expensive	Less expensive
Results	Delayed result	Instant, measurable result (how often, how many see, watch/listen, engage with the ads)

In what contexts would these traditional media still be effective?

What types of products/services can be promoted in these channels?
show some good examples.

2) Digital/Online advertising

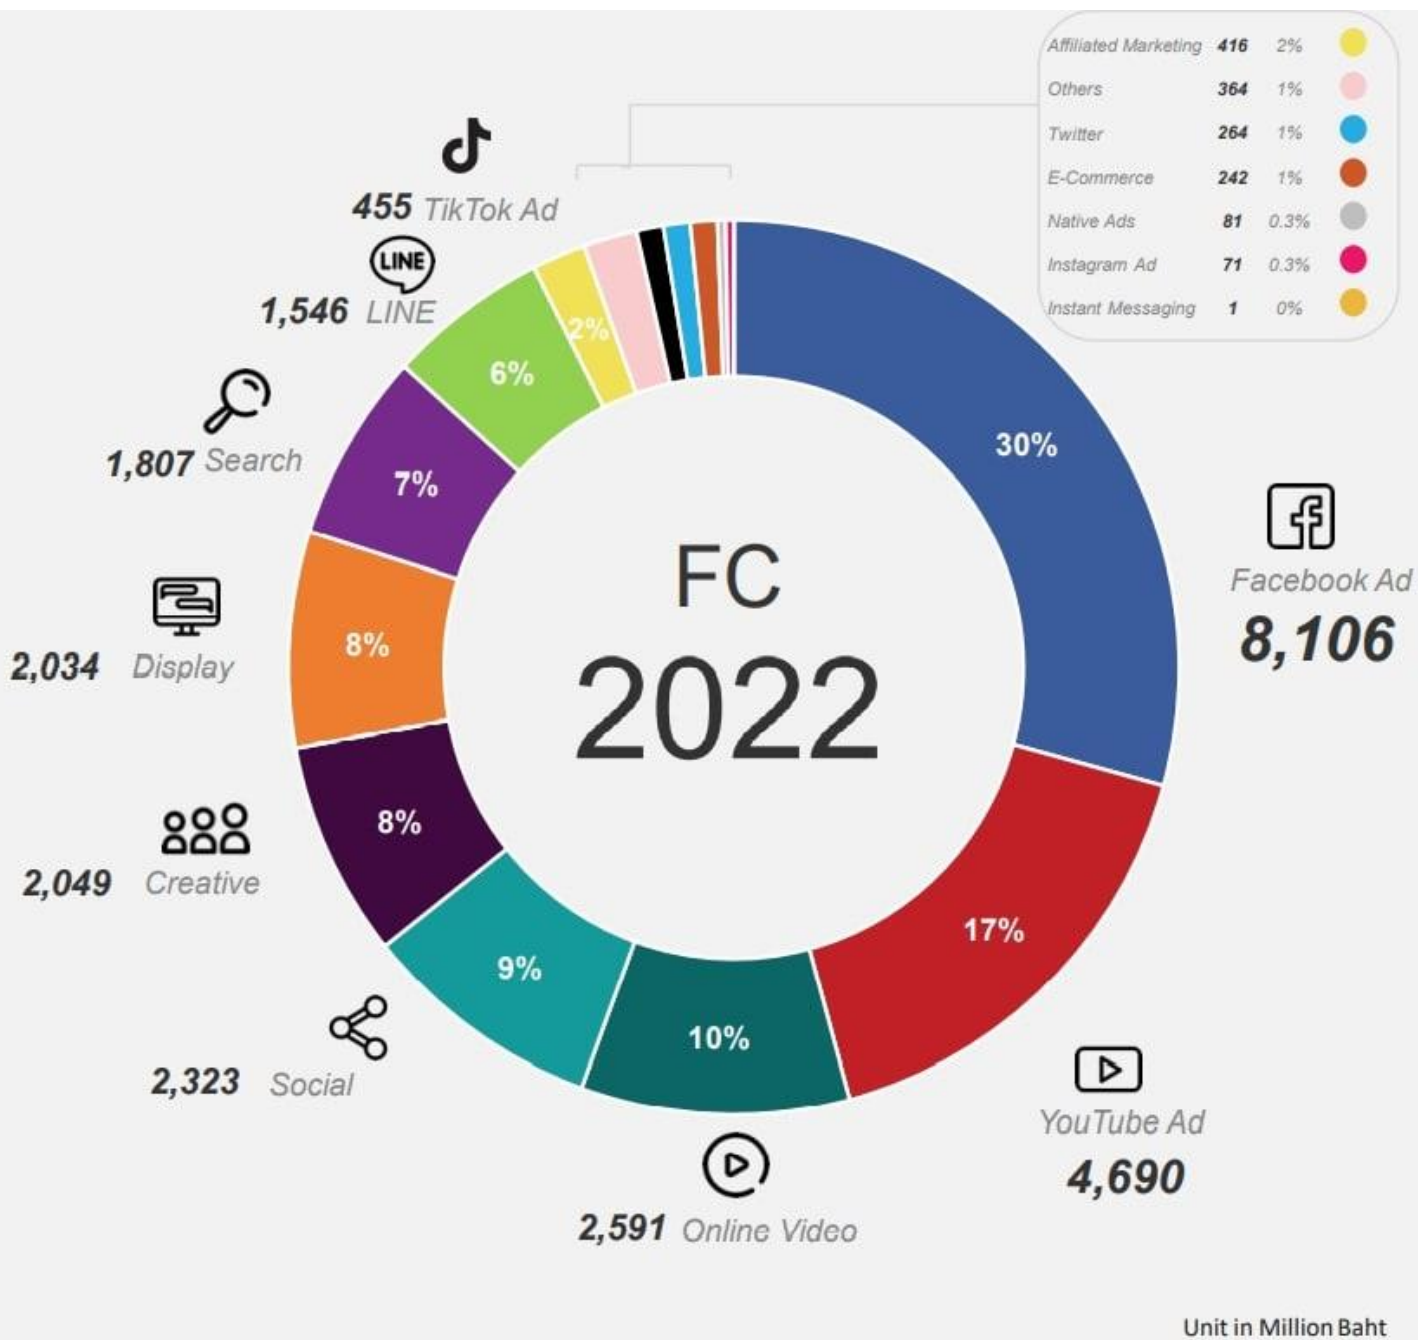

- A form of ad that uses the Internet to attract customers
- Pro: large target audience, high selectivity, low cost, fast response, better engagement, trackable results, higher conversion rate
- Con: demographically skewed audience, audience controls exposure (spam/ad block), relatively low impact, high clutter
- Types
 - Display advertising (banner, dynamic ad)
 - Search advertising (google)

face facts

For sensitive skin, keep your beauty routine plain and simple.

With the increasing number of environmental aggressors we are exposed to on a daily basis, it is no wonder that so many of us suffer from sensitive skin. UVA and UVB rays are rampant ageing aggressors, pollution clogs the skin and blocks it from functioning at its best, and wind has harsh drying effects. The onslaught is everywhere, and in order to help protect your skin, the simplest skincare routine is often the best. So try the perfume, colour and alcohol-free range from Simple.

Do you have sensitive skin?

Have you ever developed a rash after using skincare or cosmetic products?

Does your skin flare up and become itchy for no apparent reason?

Do changes in the weather irritate your skin?

Do you suffer from dry, flaky or irritated skin?

Do you react badly to abrasive exfoliators?

Does stress affect your skin?

Does your skin respond better to products that are free of additives, such as fragrance and alcohol?

Do you burn easily when exposed to the sun?

Flavor Radio!

Special Radio Advertisement Releasing a Coffee Aroma Via Sound Recognition Technology

Background & Mission

Increase the Dunkin Donuts coffee consumer base.

Seoul loves coffee. It's why it's called "The City of Coffee."

'Dunkin Donuts' is more strongly branded for donuts than coffee.

This perception leads to coffee drinkers selecting other cafes over Dunkin.

It is necessary to establish the thinking that 'Dunkin = coffee' to convince people to select Dunkin for their coffee fix.

Jingle

Releasing a Coffee Aroma

Idea

Created coffee aroma atomizers triggered by the Dunkin' Donuts jingle sound.

Our targets usually commute to work primarily via public transportation on buses and subways due to traffic congestion in Seoul. So we created a machine that releases a coffee aroma when the Dunkin' Donuts jingle is heard. The machine is installed in buses and is only triggered by the Dunkin radio ad. People exposed to this spatial ad are subtly reminded of coffee along with Dunkin, and as a result visit Dunkin' Donuts shops on their way to work.

Result

- More than 350,000 people experienced the ad during the campaign.
- Visitors increased 16%, Sales of Dunkin Donuts increased 29% (shops located by bus stops)
- People exposed to this advertising are inclined to think Dunkin' Donuts as a coffee "expert".

Hyper-realistic advertising

- Advertisements that utilize computer-generated imagery (CGI) or other techniques to create visuals that appear indistinguishable from real life. These ads aim to capture the viewer's attention with stunning detail, blurring the lines between reality and the advertisement itself.
- CGI and Advanced Techniques: Hyper-realistic ads rely heavily on CGI technology to create highly detailed and lifelike visuals. This can include 3D modeling, texture mapping, and advanced lighting effects.
- Focus on Immersion: The goal is to create an immersive experience for the viewer, drawing them into the ad as if they are witnessing a real scene. This can be achieved through realistic lighting, textures, and movement.
- Sensory Appeal: Hyper-realistic ads can leverage all aspects of visual detail, sometimes incorporating sound effects or interactive elements to further enhance the sense of realism.
- Emotional Connection: The lifelike quality of hyper-realistic ads can evoke emotional responses in viewers, making the advertised product or brand more memorable.

SENT BY GLADE®

FOR THE FIRST TIME, ONLINE SHOPPING BECOMES A FRAGRANCE SAMPLING EXPERIENCE

CHALLENGE

Scent is something you have to experience in person, with your senses. With more and more people shopping online instead of in stores, Glade had to find a way to add scent to e-commerce.

IDEA

We intercepted online shoppers with a Glade fragrance experience, unexpectedly packed into their online orders. We transformed ubiquitous packing air-pillows, that typically protect online orders, into vessels that smuggle our new scent into people's homes. We created the first ever fragrance-filled packing pillow. That way, when people popped the pillows to recycle them, they got to sample, physically interact with and feel our new fragrance. Glade elevated an otherwise ordinary unpacking routine, into an unexpected, immersive and fragrant experience, that also led to friction-free conversion with a simple scan-to-purchase code.

III. Personal Selling

- ❑ Direct person-to-person communication whereby a seller inform potential customers about a product/brand, and attempts to assist and persuade buyers to purchase a product/service
- ❑ Channel: face-to-face, over the phone, through videoconference or interactive program
- ❑ Effective personal selling
 - ❑ addresses the buyer's needs and preferences without making him or her feel pressured.
 - ❑ offer advice, information, and recommendations,
 - ❑ help buyers save money and time during the decision process.
 - ❑ give honest responses to any questions or objections the buyer has

Common techniques of personal selling

Sales presentations:	• in-person or virtual presentations to inform prospective customers about a product, service, or organization
Conversations:	• relationship-building dialogue with prospective buyers for the purposes of influencing or making sales
Demonstrations:	• demonstrating how a product or service works and the benefits it offers, highlighting advantageous features and how the offering solves problems the customer encounters
Addressing objections:	• identifying and addressing the concerns of prospective customers, to remove any perceived obstacles to making a purchase
Field selling:	• sales calls by a sales representative to connect with target customers in person or via phone
Retail selling:	• in-store assistance from a sales clerk to help customers find, select, and purchase products that meet their needs
Door-to-door selling:	• offering products for sale by going door-to-door in a neighborhood
Consultative selling:	• consultation with a prospective customer, where a sales representative (or consultant) learns about the problems the customer wants to solve and recommends solutions to the customer's particular problem
Reference selling:	• using satisfied customers and their positive experiences to convince target customers to purchase a product or service

Advantages and Disadvantages

• Pro

- Personal interaction leads to clear communication, allows for fast, accurate feedback and adjustments.
- Minimize wasted effort: focuses effort that has a strong probability of leading to a sale.
- Flexibility: tailor their presentations to fit the needs, motives, and behavior of individual customers.
- Most effective tool for building buyers' preferences, convictions, and actions
- Build relationship from a transaction to a personal relationship

• Con

- Most expensive of the communication tools
- Sales force require long-term commitment
- Difficult to have consistent and uniform message delivered to all customers
- Problem of finding and retaining high-quality people.
- Cannot reach a large no. of audience

When to Use Personal Selling

Product factor

- highly technical, specialized, or costly—such as complex software systems, business consulting services, homes, and automobiles.
- in the introductory stage of its life cycle,
- requires personal attention to match consumer needs, or requires product demonstration or after-sales services.

Market factor:

- serves a small number of large-size buyers or a small/local market.

Company factor:

- a firm is not in a good position to use impersonal communication media, or it cannot afford to have a large and regular advertising outlay.

Competition factor:

- competition is at such a level that consumers require persuasion and follow-up.

IV. Public Relations

PR is about reputation – the result of what you do, what you say and what others say about you.

- It is the planned and sustained effort to establish and maintain goodwill and mutual understanding between an organisation and its publics (customers, suppliers, stockholders, employees, the government, and the general public).” — Chartered Institute of Public Relations
- The process of maintaining a favorable image and building beneficial relationships between an organization and the public communities, groups, and people it serves.
- The management function/division in an organization which evaluate public attitudes, identify policies, execute a program to earn public understanding and acceptance
- Objectives
 - Inform target audiences about positive associations with a product, service, brand, or organization and Stimulate demand for a product/service
 - Build up a good corporate image
 - Handle unfavorable rumors, stories, events

When to use PR

- something newsworthy that marketers would like to share with the public
 - One of your products wins a “best in category” prize awarded by a trade group.
 - You sponsor and help organize a 10K race to benefit a local charity.
 - You conduct research to better understand attitudes and behaviors among a target segment, and it yields insights your customers would find interesting and beneficial.
 - Your organization develops an innovative technology or approach that is different and better than anything else available.
 - A customer shares impressive and well-documented results about the cost savings they have realized from using your products or services.
 - Your organization is hiring a new CEO or other significant executive appointment.
 - You enter into a partnership with another organization to collaborate on providing broader and more complete services to a target market segment.
 - You merge with another company.
- facing a public emergency or crisis
 - A quality-assurance problem leads your company to issue a recall for one of your products.

Different tools of PR (PENCIL)

- Publication: press release, annual report, newsletter, brochures
- Events: organize or sponsor exhibition, concert, sport events
- News (publicity): get a talk in media channel, send favorable stories about the product, brands, company to media
- Community: involve in community activities e.g. charity, fund-raising, CSR
- Identity media: uniform, business card, office building, facility (open house: give publics' access to plant facility)
- Lobbying: efforts to influence favorable legislations/build relations with government officials

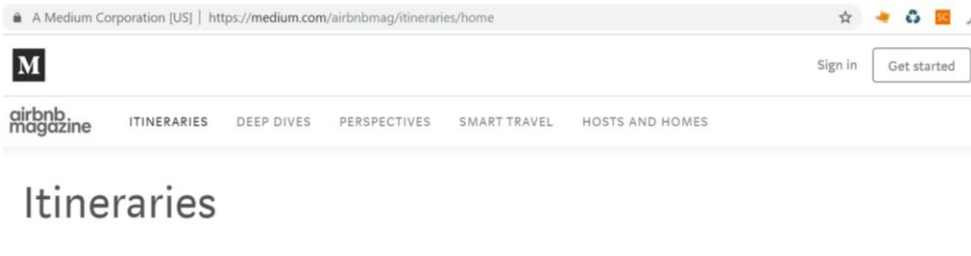

PR strives to earn a favorable image by drawing attention to newsworthy and attention-worthy activities of the organization and its customers. PR is often referred to as “free advertising.”

After all, when reading online, there are continual interruptions with pop-up ads, videos, and other digital noise. Compared to that, a print magazine seems like a soothing way to relax and explore new topics at our leisure.

These magazines tend to be focused on specific niches and target markets where consumers have focused queries and interests. Not everyone wants to read about puppies, or international travel, or music.

Publicity

- The act of attracting the media attention and gaining visibility with the public to stimulate demand for goods/services through unpaid placement of news or a favorable presentation on the TV/radio
 - News release, captioned photo, featured articles, press conferences
 - A newsworthy event, or a trend story
- The news is created by third party endorsement so the message seems to be more credible than that created by a firm
- Pro
 - Highly credible (news vs. marketing message)
 - No pay or Low cost
- Con
 - Low control over the publication of good or bad company news

Sponsorship

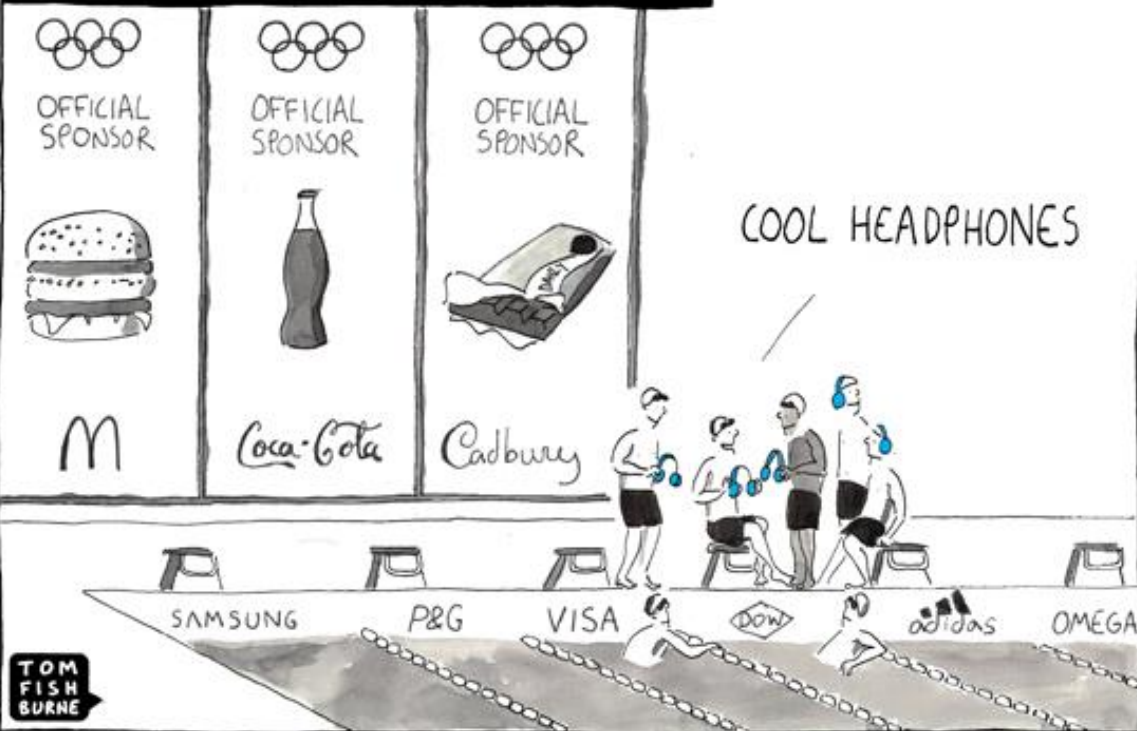

- An organization provides money or in-kind resources to an event or activity in exchange for a direct association with that event or activity
- The sponsor purchases two things:
 - (1) access to the activity's audience
 - (2) the image associated with the activity
- Sponsorships typically involve
 - advertising, sales promotion
 - publicity in the form of media coverage of the event
 - personal selling at the event itself
 - relationship marketing with its participants, the sponsoring firms, and their channel members and major customers

- Create brand awareness

Advantages and Disadvantages

- Pro

- PR activity is earned rather than paid, it tends to carry more credibility and weight than a paid advertisement from a biased source
- No pay or Low cost

- Con

- unable to fully control the authorship, content, and placement of PR.
 - An unfavorable review
 - An inaccurate and incomplete content
 - Low visible location of news

V. Direct Marketing

- Activities bypass any intermediaries and communicate directly with the individual consumer
- Purpose: to obtain an immediate response and prompt customers to take action, with the use of customized, personalized content
- Unique characteristics:
 - Nonpublic: address to a specific person
 - Immediate: message can be prepared very quickly
 - Customized: tailor to appeal to specific consumer
 - Interactive: allow a dialogue between brand/marketer and consumer, and messages can be altered depending on the consumer's response.
- Well-suited to highly targeted marketing efforts and to building one-one-one customer relationship

When to use Direct Marketing

Primary distribution channel is to sell products or services directly to customers

Rely heavily on sales promotions or discounts, and it is important to spread the word about these offers to consumers

An advertisement cannot sufficiently convey the many benefits of a company's product or service, and so a longer marketing piece is required to express the value proposition effectively

Standard advertising is not reaching its target segments, and so better-targeted communications are required to reach the right individuals for example, using direct mail to reach wealthier people according to their affluent zip code

A company sells expensive products that require more information and interaction to make the sale

A company has a known "universe" of potential customers and access to contact information and other data about these customers

A company is heavily dependent on customer retention, reorders and/or repurchasing, making it worthwhile to maintain "permissioned" marketing interaction with known customers

Forms of Direct Marketing

Traditional direct marketing

- Face-to-face selling
- Direct-mail marketing
- Catalog marketing
- Telemarketing
- Direct-response TV marketing
- Kiosk marketing

Build direct and community

Digital and social media marketing

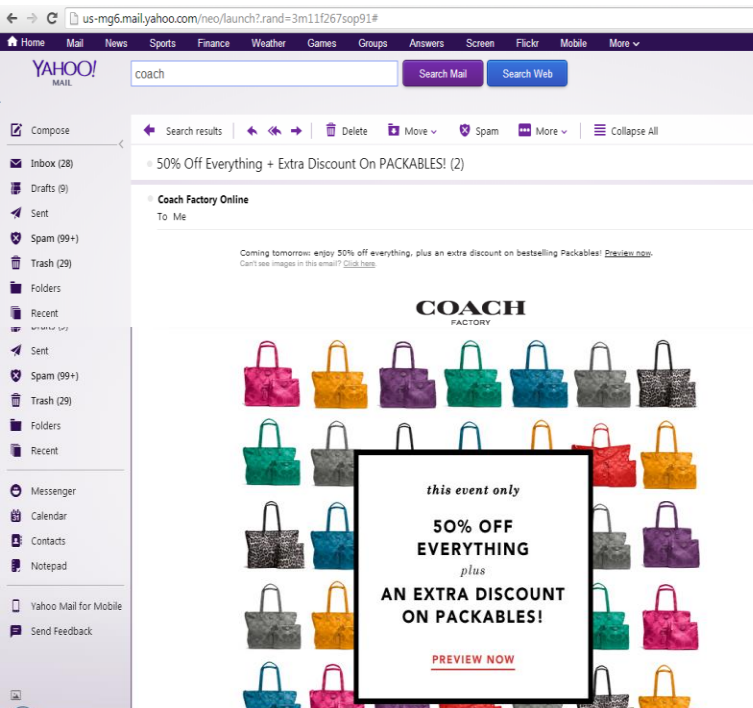

- Online marketing
(Websites, online advertising, email, online videos, blogs)
- Social media marketing
- Mobile marketing

The effectiveness of direct marketing activity depends on the use of databases to capture the information of target customers and the use of this information to extend personalized offers and information to consumers.

Direct Mail

- Send an offer, announcement, reminder to a potential customer at a physical or virtual address
- Forms of direct mail
 - letters, brochures, booklet, catalogs, samples

Telemarketing

- Direct marketing conducted entirely by telephone
 - Outbound: a sales force contacts customers
 - Inbound: a customer calls to obtain information or make purchases

TV marketing

- Direct marketing via broadcast channels
 - Direct response spot (30-90 seconds) include product description and toll-free phone number for ordering
 - Infomercial: 30-minute or longer product commercials
 - Home shopping channel: function as on-air catalogs

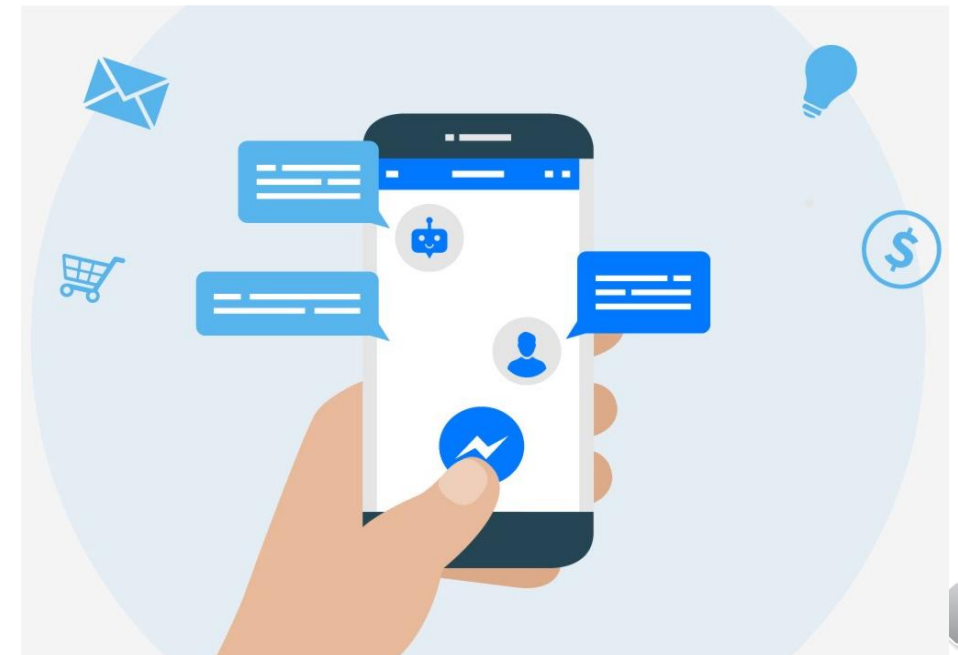

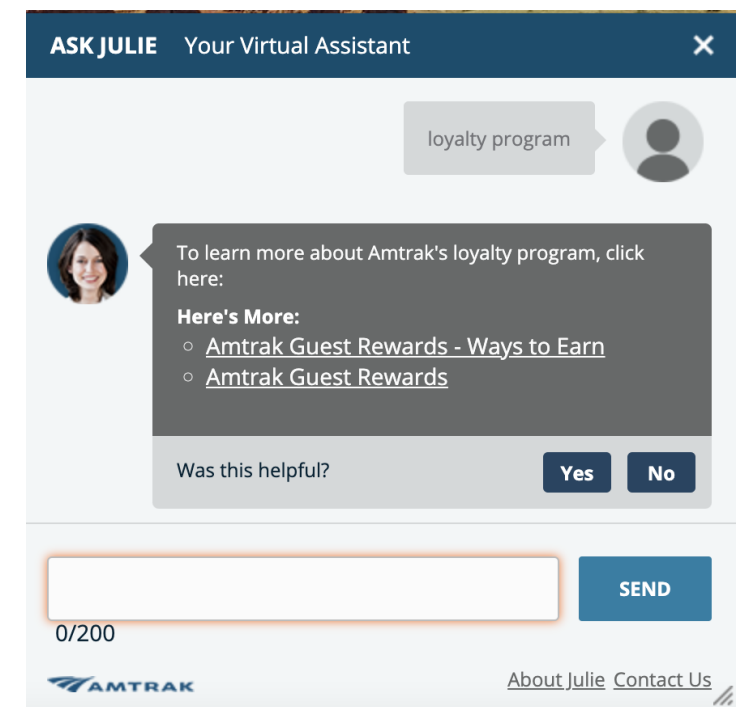

Kiosk marketing

- Kiosks are everywhere from self-service hotel, airline check-in devices to in-store ordering devices
 - Hotel: view reservation, get room keys, check in-out
 - Airline: select seat assignment, print boarding pass
 - Kodak/fuji: transfer pictures from memory card, mobile phone, edit them, and make color prints
 - Tops: print personal shopping list
 - Redbox: browse the movie, swipe debit/credit card to rent a movie, and reserve DVD online to ensure the availability before reaching a kiosk

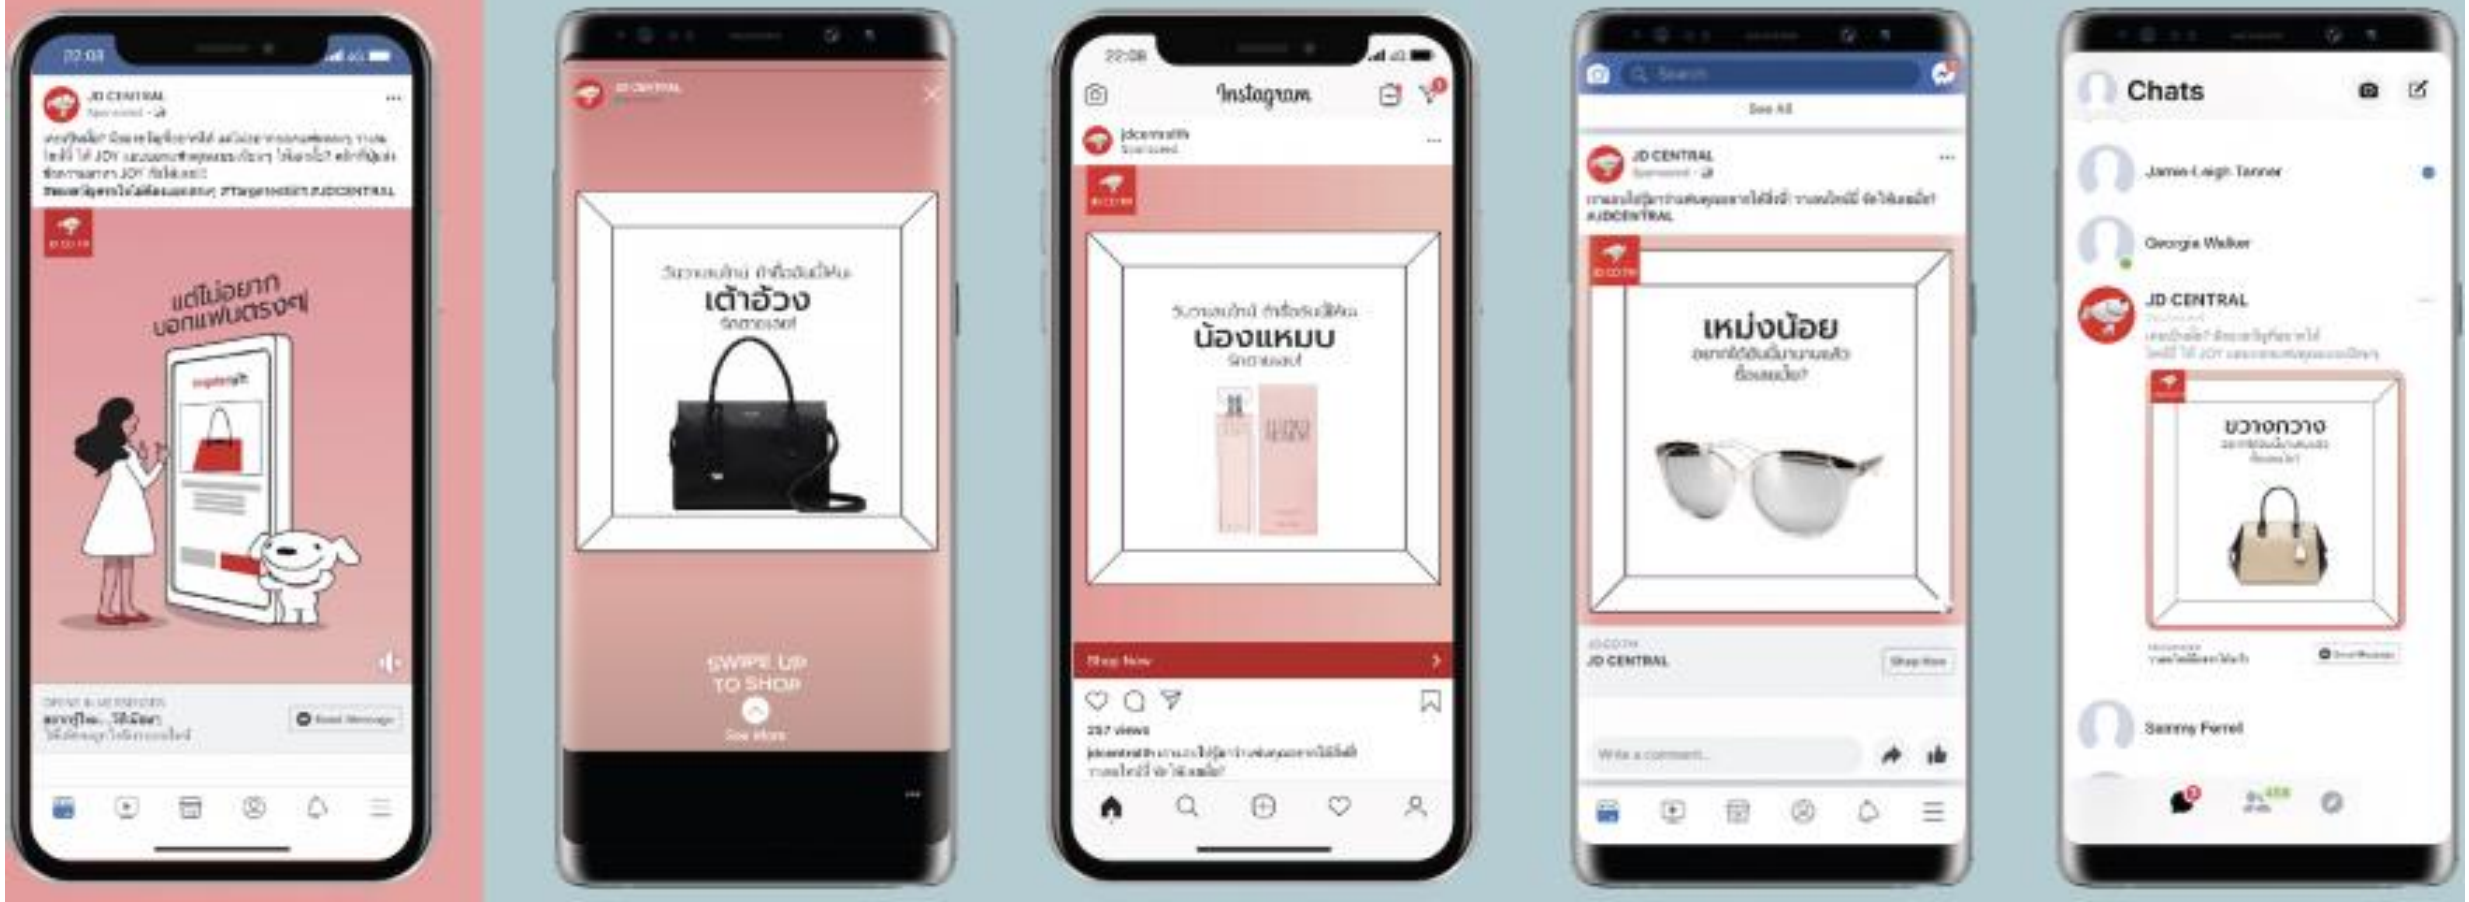

Online & social media marketing

- An unpaid form of marketing communication through interactive media which allow for a 2-way flow of info whereby users can participate in and modify the content they receive in real time
- Forms of online marketing
 - Website, blog (live chat)
 - Third-party forum e.g. pantip
 - Social networking sites e.g. FB, IG
 - Messenger e.g. FB, Line
- Multi-functions
 - To provide info, answer their questions/concern
 - To provide customer service and support
 - To obtain customer database information
 - To build and maintain customer relationships
 - To implement sales promotion
 - To implement publicity/public relations programs

Targeted Advertising

Thai e-commerce brand JD Central's Valentine's Day campaign let girls drop gift hints to their partners via a chatbot that sent targeted ads to their boyfriends. The ads allows them to click through to the exact item and buy in time for Valentine's Day. Ultimately, the ads created a way for boyfriends to buy the right present for their girlfriends directly via Facebook ad.
